This publication is a result of the collaboration of the many individuals and organisations who have invested a lot of time and effort to create new words for the Māori language over at least the past twenty years.

Unfortunately due to the nature of APA referencing, technology being developed and replaced at such a rapid pace, contractors being paid to create new terminology and assign all of their rights to the company paying them, and others in the language community being whakama or just creating new terminology so they can communicate in a daily situation as Joseph Ramanui has done with Pokemon names and terminology, the original authors of a large grouping of new terminology has been lost while the words have become normalised in our language. One example is the 2 Degrees terminology which was created by Te Wareko Ainga. But with more research and direct contacts I am sure others will come forward with the original of the new terminology.

I want to acknowledge those who assisted in the Editions 1 and 2. Greg Ford, Akuhata Tangere, Te Taka Keenga, Te Matakuru O'Connell, Dr Te Taka Keegan and Tom Roa, to Kura Kaupapa Māori and Waikato University.

A key figure in the digital era and recognizing the need for Māori to adapt te reo Māori is Ian Cormack a Te Taura Whiri i te reo Māori registered Māori Translator and Interpreters License holder under Section 15(2) c of the Māori Language Act 1987 who was the translator for many of the projects including, Facebook terms, Twitter terms and Silverstripe CMS in addition to various other publications that he has authored under his own name.

Commercial entities such as Microsoft, Google and Silverstripe who have taken the initiative to recognise te reo Māori and offer it as an option must be recognized for their assistance to the continuing growth and support of te reo Māori. Without these major contributions it would be difficult for many people to use and see te reo Māori in their professional and social time while using the Internet and computers.

Introduction

Over 374,000 unique headwords with translations from 32 different recorded sources makes this dictionary over six times larger than Ryan Modern Māori Dictionary, with almost 15 times more head words than the Williams dictionary.

This is a specialised dictionary of Māori language that concentrates on one aspect of technology and also includes terminology and names from the recent global phenomenal augmented reality game Pokémon.

The wide range of sources and terminology demonstrates the growing popularity of the Māori language in the past decade and I hope this is a positive indication that it will continue to prosper and receive the recognition that it deserves.

It has been almost 20 years since Māori language software that offers a bilingual interface on a Windows computer was first released. Many of the terms translated in the late 1990's are still in use today.

At the time Editions 1 and 2 were compiled there was little interest from the Māori language community to adapt the language to technology. Pockets of language practitioners were translating words for their own usage and did not distribute the words as they were not authorised translations by Te Taura Whiri i te reo Māori (The Māori Language Commission), despite the fact the commission at the time, did not have the capacity to provide assistance.

Much has changed in the last ten years since edition 2 was compiled. International corporations, small businesses and expert translators who are recognised by Te Taura Whiri have invested both money, time and other resources to translate and create new terms that Enable Māori language learners and speakers to use software, smart phones and social media in the Māori language.

Corporations such as Google and Microsoft have completed bilingual interfaces for Māori language, a smart phone while very limited in its ability, has Māori language as the interface language and various software and social media has been translated into or had new terms translated into Māori language. Some terms are not legitimate as they are translations of TradeMark names, however they are included in this compilation as Māori media and reach of the Internet has made these terms common and socially accepted terms of Māori language.

Technology barriers and digital divide issues are on the decline. As a result, Māori language needs to be used in technology to ensure its ongoing relevance and survival. As whanau increase their use of technology as a preferred means of communication, this generates demand for Māori language options in a modern connected world, where more Māori than non-Māori use social media and over 80% of Māori are connected to the Internet [1].

Having interfaces in the Māori language creates the unintended issue that there is new terminology that is not understood due the terminology being newly adapted and created. It needs time to be normalised and learned. Most of the technology language initiatives did not include public glossaries of the kupu hou, and they continue to be omitted. It is likely that this will hinder the usage of bilingual software and systems by end users. It is certainly a barrier for developers who want to make their software and system bilingual but are faced with two options to either create new words at a large cost or create further confusion of new words or to not offer a bilingual option.

Mato, Keegan, and Naera discuss the usability of the first bilingual Māori smartphone, their analysis regarding the usability of Māori language could be equally applied to any bilingual interface[2]. They also assert from the first pilot study that users will use the Māori language interface but will switch to English when they consider the navigation is unnecessarily prolonged or difficult. These users reported high levels of language switching because, although they wanted to use te reo Māori, they found it easier to use the English language interface when they needed to complete tasks quickly.

English

Label (Label is The human-readable label assigned to the term. Name is The unique token assigned to the term)	Contributor
Definition	An entity responsible for making contributions to the content of the resource.
Comment	Examples of a Contributor include a person, an organisation, or a service. Typically, the name of a Contributor should be used to indicate the entity

Label	Coverage
Definition	The extent or scope of the content of the resource
Comment Coverage will typically include spatial location (a place name or geographic coordinates), temporal period (a period label, date, or date range) or jurisdiction (such as a named administrative entity). Recommended best practice is to select a value from a controlled vocabulary (for example, the Thesaurus of Geographic Names [TGN]) and that, where appropriate, named places or time periods be used in preference to numeric identifiers such as sets of coordinates or date ranges.

Label	Creator
Definition	An entity primarily responsible for making the content of the resource.
Comment	Examples of a Creator include a person, an organisation, or a service. Typically, the name of a Creator should be used to indicate the entity.

Label	Date
Definition	A date associated with an event in the life cycle of the resource.
Comment	Typically, Date will be associated with the creation or availability of the resource. Recommended best practice for encoding the date value is defined in a profile of ISO 8601

	[W3CDTF] and follows the YYYY-MMDD format.

Label	Description
Definition	An account of the content of the resource.
Comment	Description may include but is not limited to: an abstract, table of contents, reference to a graphical representation of content or a freetext account of the content.

Label	Format
Definition	The physical or digital manifestation of the resource
Comment	Typically, Format may include the media-type or dimensions of the resource. Format may be used to determine the software, hardware or other equipment needed to display or operate the resource. Examples of dimensions include size and duration. Recommended best practice is to select a value from a controlled vocabulary (for example, the list of Internet Media Types [MIME] defining computer media formats).

Label	Resource Identifier
Definition	An unambiguous reference to the resource within a given context.
Comment	Recommended best practice is to identify the resource by means of a string or number conforming to a formal identification system. Example formal identification systems include the Uniform Resource Identifier (URI) (including the Uniform Resource Locator (URL)), the Digital Object Identifier (DOI) and the International Standard Book Number (ISBN).

Label	Language
Definition	A language of the intellectual content of the resource.
Comment	Recommended best practice is to use RFC 3066 [RFC3066], which, in conjunction with ISO 639 [ISO639], defines two- and three-letter primary language tags with optional subtags. Examples include "en" or "eng" for English, "akk" for Akkadian, and "en-GB" for English used in the United Kingdom.

Label	Publisher
Definition	An entity responsible for making the resource available
Comment	Examples of a Publisher include a person, an organisation, or a service. Typically, the name of a Publisher should be used to indicate the entity.

Label	Relation
Definition	A reference to a related resource.
Comment	Recommended best practice is to reference the resource by means of a string or number conforming to a formal identification system

Label	Rights Management
	Information about rights held in and over the resource
	Typically, a Rights element will contain a rights management statement for the resource, or reference a service providing such information. Rights information often encompasses Intellectual Property Rights (IPR), Copyright, and various Property Rights. If the Rights element is absent, no assumptions can be made about the status of these and other rights with respect to the resource.

Label	Source
Definition	A reference to a resource from which the present resource is derived
Comment	The present resource may be derived from the Source resource in whole or in part. Recommended best practice is to reference the resource by means of a string or number conforming to a formal identification system.

Label	Subject and Keywords
Definition	The topic of the content of the resource
Comment	Typically, a Subject will be expressed as keywords, key phrases or classification codes that describe a topic of the resource. Recommended best practice is to select a value from a controlled vocabulary or formal classification scheme

Label	Title
Definition	A name given to the resource.
Comment	Typically, a Title will be a name by which the resource is formally known

Label	Resource Type
Definition	The nature or genre of the content of the resource
Comment	Type includes terms describing general categories, functions, genres, or aggregation levels for content. Recommended best practice is to select a value from a controlled vocabulary (for example, the DCMI Type Vocabulary [DCMITYPE]). To describe the physical or digital manifestation of the resource, use the Format element.
